MARIE DORO TO PLAY LEADING ROLE IN MRS. BELMONT'S SUFFRAGE OPERETTA

Marie Doro and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

New York, Jan. 31.—Melinda, she's Miss Pepper, you know—is having a terrible time with her shoes. Melinda, as the central figure of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's suffrage operetta and a dyed-in-the-wool vote chaser, necessarily aims at presenting a symbolic figure of woman free and all that sort of thing.

At least that is what the mild-eyed Marie Doro, who is to be Melinda when the opera is produced at the Waldorf-Astoria on Feb. 18, aims at.

She has a vivid picture of the young Pepper—there are seven others—in her mind, and has settled on a sort of modified classical as the proper drapery for her, but she is dreadfully at sea about the shoes. She thinks that sandals are the proper caper.

Well, of course, sandals can be as saucy and piquant as well as playfooted—that cross gartered effect, for instance, with ribbons climbing—O, quite some distance above a slim ankle that the girls are affecting after the fashion of Becky Sharp. But that's not Miss Doro's idea at all.

"Melinda is a suffragist," she said, "and awfully sincere, don't you see; she converts everybody to the cause in the end and she couldn't do it in high heels, now, could she? I think something sensible—a low, broad heel, eh?" (she was surveying her own ridiculously slender foot with a plying expression). "I shall have to stand very squarely, you understand."

"Come out flatfooted for the hallot," one of the other players suggested maliciously. "But you might throw in a few bare toes to make the balance even."

Sybil Vane, a protege of Sir Herbert Tree, will have one of the principal roles. Melinda will appear in another picturesque character.

Mrs. Schirmer White, Miss Pauline Diston of Philadelphia, who is the dancing daughter afflicted with Castlemania; Miss Dorothy Fellows Gordon of London as the singing sister; Miss Dorothy Bigelow, Miss Louise Trevor, Miss Audrey Osborn, and a society chorus will make up the personnel.

Of course there is a suffrage parade, blatant with banners.

"No stockings," Miss Doro insisted severely, as she fled to rehearsal.

Miss Marie Dressler will interpret the ambitious mama, whose watchword is: "Society is the key to the higher life—publicity."

The various daughters who have dabbled in art and other accomplishments, returning home old-fashioned names transmuted to high sounding titles to match their careers, are assembled to celebrate Mrs. Pepper's birthday.

Melinda, whose occupation has been shrouded in mystery, appears on the scene unexpectedly to wish her mother joy. Instead of a host of gay friends like her sisters, she brings a trail of tired little workers and others she has lifted from the slough of despond. The lines sparkle with such hits at society as the chronic untruthfulness of women's hair.

Professional will be mingled with society talent in the cast of the opera; which is being staged by Miss Ella Maxwell, the composer. Miss Maxwell is a Californian, who has worked chiefly in London.

Sybil Vane, a protege of Sir Herbert Tree, will have one of the principal roles. Melinda will appear in another picturesque character.

Mrs. Schirmer White, Miss Pauline Diston of Philadelphia, who is the dancing daughter afflicted with Castlemania; Miss Dorothy Fellows Gordon of London as the singing sister; Miss Dorothy Bigelow, Miss Louise Trevor, Miss Audrey Osborn, and a society chorus will make up the personnel.

DRYS CONFER AT SUNDAY MEETING

Decision is Reached to Wage Anti-Saloon Fight in South Moline Township.

At a meeting held yesterday in the Congregational church of East Moline, decision was reached to wage a campaign to banish saloons from South Moline township. Rev. C. T. Cady presided in the absence of Rev. Malcolm Miller.

Petitions were placed in circulation at once and these, asking that the question of local option be on the ballots for vote at the township election Tuesday, April 4, will be filed Wednesday of this week. A committee of three—A. D. Taft, Mrs. Charles Sorenson and William Clark—was named to complete the canvass for signatures to the petitions, and Clark Corbin of Silvis volunteered to aid in the work.

His offer was accepted and the work of getting the required 104 signers is now in progress.

Clarence S. Trevor has been named manager of the local option campaign in Moline.

HOOK WORM'S SPELL GETS BERGER IN BAD

William Berger yesterday afternoon had a chance to shovel his way out of a county jail sentence. But Bill was possessed of the hook-worm, according to his own diagnosis of his case, and after 10 swaths with the shovel in front of the police station the worm predominated.

Bill rapped on the police station window and said that there was an insurrection and declared a strike. A bluecoat issued the ultimatum, "work or the county jail."

"Then it's the jug for me," said Bill. He turned over the shovel and sneaked back into a warm cell. This morning he drew 30 days for vagrancy and apparently seemed satisfied.

A disorderly house at 314 Twenty-second street was raided at 11:15 o'clock Saturday night by Detective Herman Schnert and Patrolman Berry. H. C. Wilson was arrested as the keeper. He paid $10 and costs and five women inmates were each assessed $5 and costs. They gave the names of Perna Washington, Lillian Washington, Ollie Matjoy, May Burton and Violet Johnson.

Anna Brew was fined $5 and costs and ordered out of the city. Police said she was a street walker.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) After one has been to the theater is it according to form to have dinner before going home?

(2) What would be proper to order at that time?

(3) Does the girl order for herself?

(4) What are the uses of the different forks?

(5) Is it all right to go to roof gardens. What sort of places are they?

(6) When at dinner in the home of an acquaintance and the hostess insists upon your taking another helping, what is a polite, graceful way of refusing?

(7) A girl friend schoolmate married and lives in another town. She has asked me many times to visit her. Her brother and I were very good friends when we were small. He is coming to her house (he makes it his home) from college before he leaves for another state for work. Do you think it would be all right for me to accept her invitation and tell her it convenient that I would like to visit her when her brother is home?

(8) I ask the mistress of the house if she objects to your letting the young man call. If she doesn't probably it would be all right to let him come. If you find she would rather you did not let him call, don't let him. He can take you somewhere if he wants to see you very badly.

(9) Since you have not accepted your friend's invitation to visit her alone you can hardly ask to come when her brother is there. It would show that you are more interested in the brother than in your school friend. You would also appear to have too much interest in the brother.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 24 and have been doing housework in a private family for three years. Recently I commenced going with a young man of quiet disposition and good moral character. After we had gone together about two months the man for whom I work told me my friend couldn't come there any more to see me. He wants me to marry his son and he had already told me that I told my friend what he said and told him to come anyway. Now when he comes the man doesn't even notice him unless it is to say something smart. I think very much of his wife and she never says a word when he is lecturing me. In fact, he does most of his lecturing during her absence. I told him I had never worked where I could not have good respectable men call. What would you advise me to do?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

serve while piping hot. These are delicious and taste considerably like real oysters.

THE TABLE.

Custard Cornbread—Put in mixing bowl one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda, one cup sweet milk, one cup sour milk, one-half cup sugar, two eggs. Beat this well, then add 1½ cups cornmeal and one-half cup flour. Mix well and pour the thin batter into a good hot pan which has two tablespoons of hot melted butter in it; set in oven and pour into the center one cup sweet milk; do not move or stir the pan, but close oven door carefully. If not moved it will be a perfect custard. It looks very thin when poured into baking pan, but let it get just as directed, no more no less, and it comes out fine. Bake one-half hour in moderate oven. Do not thicken it or you spoil it.

Prune Compote—One-half pound prunes, one cup sugar, juice of one lemon, two cups water, whipped cream, nut meats. Select large prunes, remove stones, place in deep baking dish with sugar, lemon juice and water. Bake until soft. When cold heap with sherbet glasses and serve with whipped cream and nut meats.

Pumpkin Brown Bread—Two cups pumpkin juice, three cups yellow corn meal, three cups rye meal, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, two cups milk, one teaspoon baking soda. Mix, beat well, turn into buttered tin, cover, steam five hours.

Creamed Cauliflower—Wash, cut up in small pieces, put in stew pan, cover with water, salt lightly and cook until tender. Drain off water, add cup of rich milk, piece of butter, salt and pepper to taste.

Creamed Cabbage—One small head cabbage cut up as for slaw; put in pan, nearly cover with water, cook until tender. Drain off water, add a tablespoon of lard or bacon fryings in skillet, turn in cabbage and stir until slightly browned; add one cup rich milk or cream. Stir one tablespoon flour into milk and just before dishing up add tablespoon of vinegar.

Cabbage No. 1—Cut one small head of cabbage very fine, add two cups boiling water, one large spoon butter or lard, salt and pepper to taste. Boil 15 minutes. Add one-half cup white vinegar, one-half cup granulated sugar; boil five minutes more. Serve hot.

Cabbage No. 2—Cut cabbage fine, boil half hour in salt water, drain; sprinkle one tablespoon flour over cabbage, stir in one pint sweet cream; boil two minutes, add one-half cup white vinegar, one tablespoon sugar, dash white pepper. This can be eaten hot or cold.

Cabbage a la Empire—One cabbage three large sour apples, one-half cup lard or butter, 12 slices bacon, one-half cup stock, tablespoon vinegar, salt, pepper, nutmeg. Shred cabbage fine, peel and slice apples. Melt lard in pan, line bottom with half of the bacon, put in cabbage and apples, cover with bacon and mash, and if there are more than you want for soup, set aside for supper. Season the water in which they were cooked with butter, salt and pepper, one pint of cream; and milk together with a little celery or celery seed, and add the mashed pulp.

Mock Fried Oysters—Take the mashed "salsify" reserved from the soup, add two beaten eggs, two spoonfuls of cream or melted butter, salt and pepper, make in cakes and fry in deep fat until both sides are nicely browned;
